If gasolene is reduce the annual fire loss of the handled at night its vapor will state about a million dollars.

Alcohol is an excellent solvent for grease, paint, or gum, so, even if the cost be double that of gasolene it will be used for cleaning inces, gloves, ribbons, silks and other textile fabrics, because it leaves the article cleansed without persistent or disagreeable odor. Alcohol makes up the bulk of all fine perfumes, it being used as a solvent. Alcohol evaporates but half as fast as gosolene and its vapor being lighter than air is carried away so that it does not accumiate and make air an explosive.;

Gasolene vapor being heavier than air remains in the vessel or on the floor if spilled. A teaspoonful and a half of gasolene will make a bucketful of air a high explosive. No! Well, figure it yourself. Gasolene gives off 130 times its bulk of vapor. A mass of air to which one-fifteenth of its bulk of the vapor is added is a highly explosive gas.

An explosion of gasolene vapor in the basement of a store in Alliance killed six people, wrecked a four-story building, and shattered windows for blocks.

For starting a fire in a stove, alcohol is safe unless the stove is still warm from the previous fire. The use of alcohol for this purpose will lessen the number of occasions for the use of this parodied verse from The Elegy:
